Artist Quote:

“‘Headless’ was born out of the unease of being the outsider, the fear of being judged, and the terror of facing a community that doesn't understand. I wanted to capture that relentless dread with an intensity that never lets up.”

Lyrical Themes: The song delves into the anxiety of fitting in, the fear of stepping out of line, and the ominous presence of being different in a world that doesn't tolerate outsiders. With lyrics like, "You better fit in, don't dare step out of line, know they don't kill their own kind," Martin channels the foreboding aura of the Sleepy Hollow legend, making listeners feel the looming threat of the unknown.

ENDORSEMENTS:

John Mason (Back Bay Guitar Trio): “Headless picks up the tempo and urgency from the previous song, setting the stage for the intensity that Martin brings. The darkness is palpable, with a deep detuned electric guitar and violin stabs reminiscent of Psycho! Jess Martin’s creative arrangements and fearless songwriting make her one of the most important voices to emerge in quite some time.”
